This book is a reworked version of my doctoral dissertation, which I defended in 2014. As I soon thereafter found work as Associate Professor of Scandinavian Literature, my interest in Herman Melville ended up dormant for several years. In 2021, the possibility to finally turn the dissertation into a book appeared. For this, I am thankful to Cappelen Damm Akademisk. I also want to thank the University of Bergen Library and the Department of Linguistic, Literary and Aesthetic Studies at the University of Bergen, who jointly funded the publication. An earlier, much shorter version of Chapter 2 was published in the journal Political Concepts in 2011, whereas Chapter 5 was published as an article in Leviathan: A Journal of Melville Studies in 2017. Thank you to the publishers for the right to reprint.

Thank you to my doctoral advisors, Erik Bjerck Hagen and the late Atle Kittang, at the University of Bergen, and Samuel Otter, at UC Berkeley. A sincere thank you also goes to all the scholars who generously helped me during my time as a doctoral candidate, and to my PhD opponents, Branka Arsić and Dave Watson, for their valuable input during the defense. Finally, I would like to thank my colleagues at the Department of Linguistic, Literary and Aesthetic Studies, as well as friends and family—in particular my parents, Berit and Peter, my wife, Aina, and our three boys, Håkon, August, and Jakob.
